Central Jersey APICS Presents

Uncovering “Promised ROI” from a Large Scale Systems Implementation

Prateek Parakh of Solutions4Business, Inc.

Many companies run into trouble when they shift from home grown or legacy systems to a centralized execution and planning system. In theory the approach makes sense, since efficiency should improve as everyone sees and interact with same data. However, in practice it leads to frustrated users who see it more as a nuisance. An explosion of spreadsheets appears to perform the simplest of tasks, many that were done within the legacy system before the new system came to life. Implementation teams often miss the opportunity to bring about true step change in business performance. A structured approach is needed to leverage the investment. It begins by mapping out business process changes, system data requirements, identifying training needs and drawing up a structured learning program for the business users.

Who should attend? Functional managers, project managers, business analysts, project team members and professionals looking for ideas to avoid the pit falls of the new systems and business process implementations.

What will I learn? Attendees will get an opportunity to share their own experiences and challenges while learning from the facilitator’s experiences. The session also looks into root causes of post-implementation challenges, and generates ideas on what needs to be done to build trust in the systems. Key elements of change will be discussed, as we consider how to build a learning organization that addresses the issues before they boil over into frustration for the end user community. Attendees will develop an understanding with regards to the role end users and the project team plays in delivering measurable success.

President’s Message

It’s certainly exciting to be part of a growing chapter. Monthly PDM attendance has steadily increased. It’s great to see the enthusiasm from both our new & seasoned members. The Board of Directors are doing a wonderful job promoting APICS. Our Student Chapter is growing & once again we are sponsoring 2 students to attend the International Conference this year in Orlando.

If you haven’t joined us for a PDM lately, add us to your calendar. You won’t be disappointed. Our next PDM is Wednesday, October 2nd at the Hotel Somerset. Guest Speakers are Prateek Parakh and Gary Pezzuti. Come out to learn, network & show your support.

Please visit our website for details and registration.

Hope to see you soon.
